Factoids:

So poor were Steir's skills as a doctor that his medical privileges with the Navy Hospital on Camp Pendleton were revoked were July 15, 1985.

On December 13, 1996, Steir perforated the uterus and pulled out bowel of Sharon Hamplton during an abortion in Moreno Valley, CA. Hamplton was placed in the recovery room, and Steir left the clinic to catch a plane back to his home in San Francisco. Prosecutors said Hamplton "was unstable; unable to walk on her own; complaining of pain; pale, shaky and throwing up," but Steir did nothing more to help her. The bleeding woman was put in a wheelchair and brought to her mother's car for the drive home. By the time they got there, Sharon Hamplton was dead.

Steir was convicted of manslaughter and spent 6 months in prison. He later wrote a book wherein he blamed his problems on pro-life activists.
