PETITION
(Temporary Restraining Order - EG; Injunctive Relief - EC)

Plaintiffs, by and through their undersigned attorneys, bring this Petition against the above-named Defendants, their employees, agents, and successors in office, and in support thereof state the following:

I. INTRODUCTION

1. This is an action for declaratory and injunctive relief challenging the constitutionality of portions of Senate Bill 5, 99th General Assembly, 2nd Extraordinary Session (2017 Mo.) (“S.B. 5”), to be codified at Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.6 (“the Act”), which is scheduled to take effect on October 24, 2017. See Mo Const. art III, § 29. A copy of S.B. 5, as truly agreed to and finally passed, is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

2. The Act seeks to impose on Missouri women and their physicians an extreme and unprecedented set of requirements that unduly restrict women’s ability to access an abortion in the state. On top of existing law, which forces all women in the state to make a medically unnecessary trip to a health center at least 72 hours before they can obtain an abortion, the Act adds another extremely burdensome and medically unnecessary restriction by mandating that the physician or physicians who will “perform or induce” a woman’s abortion must be the same person(s) to, orally and in person and at least 72 hours in advance of her procedure, describe certain state-mandated information to her (hereinafter “same-physician requirement”). The same-physician requirement will impose extreme burdens on physicians who provide abortion services in Missouri, some of whom will not be able to comply at all. As a result of the requirement, the Act will impose significant delays, greater medical risks, and other serious harms on patients, some of whom will be unable to access abortion at all.

3. The Act does not mandate imparting any new information to abortion patients and in fact conflicts with other provisions of existing Missouri law and additional amendments made by S.B. 5 that—consistent with accepted medical practice—provide for the same, state-mandated information to be given to the patient by a physician who is to perform or induce the abortion, or by a referring physician, or by certain licensed, qualified professionals. As a result of the conflicting requirements, it is unclear what the Act requires and allows. Noncompliance with the Act imposes criminal, licensing, and other penalties.

4. The Act will irreparably harm Plaintiffs and their patients by violating Plaintiffs' and their patients' rights under the Missouri Constitution, and by imposing significant burdens on patient care such that, for whole categories of patients, abortion care would no longer be available, and for virtually all other abortion patients, it would be either unavailable or so delayed that they would experience increased medical risk and financial costs. The Act thus violates the due process guarantees of the Missouri Constitution.

5. The Act is also unenforceable because it violates article III, section 21 of the Missouri Constitution, which prohibits legislative changes to a bill that are unrelated to the original purpose of a bill. The passage of the Act, and other provisions in S.B. 5, have resulted in a bill that unconstitutionally deviates from the original (and sole) purpose of S.B. 5, as it was introduced, which was to expand the Attorney General's jurisdiction, but now enacts a diverse set of unrelated changes to Missouri's code.

6. Accordingly, Plaintiffs seek judicial relief declaring the Act unconstitutional and granting a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction, as well as a permanent injunction, enjoining the Act's enforcement.

II. PARTIES

Plaintiffs

7. Plaintiff Comprehensive Health Services of Planned Parenthood Great Plains (“Comprehensive Health”) is a not-for-profit corporation organized under the laws of Kansas and registered to do business in Missouri. Comprehensive Health operates two health centers in the state of Missouri: one is the Midtown-Kansas City Center in Kansas City, Missouri, and the other is the Columbia Center in Columbia, Missouri. The Midtown-Kansas City Center provides medication abortion. After having been granted a license on October 3, 2017, Plaintiff Comprehensive Health will begin this month offering medication abortion, as well as surgical abortion services through 14 weeks 6 days from the first day of the woman’s last menstrual period (“lmp”). Until recently, Comprehensive Health was unable to offer abortion services in Missouri due to onerous legal restrictions, which are being challenged by Comprehensive Health and are currently enjoined in a separate, ongoing lawsuit. Plaintiff Comprehensive Health brings this action on its own behalf and on behalf of its physicians and its patients.

8. Plaintiff Reproductive Health Services of Planned Parenthood of the St. Louis Region, Inc. (“RHS”) is a not-for-profit corporation organized under the laws of Missouri. RHS provides abortion services at a health center in St. Louis, Missouri. The St. Louis Center provides abortion services and other related services, including contraceptive counseling and sexually transmitted disease testing and treatment, for abortion patients. It currently offers surgical abortion up to 21 weeks 6 days lmp, and medication abortion up to 10 weeks lmp.

9. Plaintiff RHS also wishes to offer abortion services at Planned Parenthood health centers in Springfield and Joplin, Missouri. Both health centers provide general reproductive health care, including family planning services, testing and treatment for sexually transmitted infections, cervical and breast cancer screening services, pregnancy testing, and all-options counseling. RHS does not currently provide abortion services at either health center due to restrictions in Missouri law, which RHS is challenging in separate, ongoing litigation. However, patients who live in the Springfield and Joplin areas are able to meet with a qualified, licensed professional at the Springfield health center to receive certain state-mandated information at least 72 hours before an abortion, as required by law, so that a patient can avoid making two lengthy trips to a health center that provides abortions. Plaintiff RHS sues on its own behalf and on behalf of its physicians and its patients seeking abortions.

10. Plaintiff David L. Eisenberg, MD, MPH, is a board-certified obstetrician-gynecologist. He is Associate Professor in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the Washington University School of Medicine and an Attending Physician and Director of the Benign Gynecology Resident Service at Barnes-Jewish Hospital. Dr. Eisenberg also serves as the Medical Director of RHS.

11. As part of his varied patient care, Dr. Eisenberg provides abortions at RHS and in an ob/gyn specialist group practice. Dr. Eisenberg will be subject to the requirements of the Act, if it takes effect, and to the serious penalties available for any non-compliance. Dr. Eisenberg joins this suit in his individual capacity, and not on behalf of Washington University. Dr. Eisenberg sues on his own behalf and on behalf of his patients seeking abortions.

12. Plaintiff Colleen P. McNicholas, DO, MSCI, is a board-certified obstetrician-gynecologist. She is Assistant Professor in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the Washington University School of Medicine, Director of the Ryan Residency Training Program, and Attending Physician at Barnes-Jewish Hospital.

13. As part of her varied patient care, Dr. McNicholas provides abortions at RHS and in an ob/gyn specialist group practice. She has in the past provided abortions at Plaintiff Comprehensive Health's Columbia Center and plans to resume providing there starting this month. Dr. McNicholas will be subject to the requirements of the Act, if it takes effect, and to the serious penalties available for any non-compliance. Dr. McNicholas joins this suit in her individual capacity, and not on behalf of Washington University. Dr. McNicholas sues on her own behalf and on behalf of her patients seeking abortions.

Defendants

14. Joshua D. Hawley is the Attorney General of the State of Missouri. He is charged by law with defending the interests of the State in civil tribunals, including this Court. Under S.B. 5, Attorney General Hawley has original jurisdiction throughout the state to prosecute violations of the Act, including the ability to seek injunctive relief. He is sued in his official capacity.

15. Jean Peters Baker is the Prosecuting Attorney for Jackson County. She is authorized by law to prosecute violations of the Act performed in Jackson County, and to seek injunctive relief. She is sued in her official capacity.

16. Kimberly M. Gardner is the Circuit Attorney for the City of St. Louis. She is authorized by law to prosecute violations of the Act performed in the City of St. Louis, and to seek injunctive relief. She is sued in her official capacity.

17. Daniel K. Knight is the Prosecuting Attorney for Boone County. He is authorized by law to prosecute violations of the Act performed in Boone County, and to seek injunctive relief. He is sued in his official capacity.

18. The Missouri Board of Registration for the Healing Arts (“Board”) is responsible for the licensure of Plaintiff physicians and other physicians that perform abortions at RHS and Comprehensive Health. See Mo. Rev. Stat. § 334.120.1 (establishing “board to be known as ‘The State Board of Registration for the Healing Arts’ for the purpose of registering, licensing and supervising all physicians and surgeons . . . in this state); see also Mo. Code Regs. Ann. tit. 20, § 2150-1.010.

19. David A. Poggemeier, MD, President, Jade D. James, MD, Secretary, James A. DiRenna, DO, David E. Tannehill, DO, and Sarah Martin-Anderson, PhD, MPP, MPH, are members of the Board. The Board operates at the direction of the Defendant Members, who have the power and duty to initiate investigations, to determine if a physician has engaged in unprofessional conduct, and to discipline licensed physicians. See Mo. Rev. Stat. § 334.100. Each member is sued in his or her official capacity.

III. VENUE AND JURISDICTION

20. Venue is proper in this Court pursuant to Missouri Revised Statutes Section 508.010.

21. This Court has jurisdiction to consider this Petition under Missouri Revised Statutes Sections 526.010, 527.010.

IV. FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

Abortion Background

22. Legal abortion is one of the safest procedures in contemporary medical practice.

23. Approximately one in three women in this country will have an abortion by age forty-five. Women decide to terminate a pregnancy for a variety of reasons, including familial, medical, financial, and personal reasons. Some women have abortions because they conclude that it is not the right time in their lives to have a child or to add to their families; some to preserve their life or their health; some because they receive a diagnosis of a severe fetal medical condition or anomaly; some because they have become pregnant as a result of rape; and others because they choose not to have biological children.

24. Both surgical and medication (i.e., nonsurgical) abortion options are available to women in Missouri seeking to terminate their pregnancy.

25. Medication abortion is a method of terminating an early pregnancy by taking medications that cause expulsion of the pregnancy in a manner similar to an early miscarriage. Medication abortion is available through the first ten weeks of pregnancy measured from the first day of the woman's last menstrual period ("lmp"). Each of the Plaintiffs, provides these early medication abortions to their patients.

26. Plaintiffs also perform surgical abortions, including suction abortion and, starting early in the second trimester, dilation and evacuation. Surgical abortions early in the second trimester are performed as a one-day procedure, but in Missouri, by 18 weeks lmp, two appointments on consecutive days are required.

27. Plaintiffs already struggle to provide adequate abortion access to Missouri women. None of the physicians who provide abortion services at RHS or Comprehensive Health or the individual physician Plaintiffs do so every day of the week, and instead are able only to provide abortion care for much more limited periods.

28. Specifically, Plaintiff RHS is able to provide abortion care to patients through a network of physicians, all of whom have one or more other jobs providing health services at other facilities, including facilities out of state, and therefore can only devote a limited number of hours to providing abortion care at RHS. These providers' schedules are also set several months in advance and cannot be easily rearranged, if at all, and certainly not without compromising care to their other patients.

29. Plaintiff Comprehensive Health has one physician who provides medication abortion once a week at the Midtown-Kansas City Center, but also provides care at health centers in Kansas as well. Once the Columbia Center resumes abortion services this month, a different physician will begin providing abortions there but due to other professional obligations, including providing care at several other health centers in and out of state, will only be able to travel to Columbia to provide abortion services two to three times a month, and only for one day each time.

30. The Plaintiff individual physicians function as part of an ob/gyn specialist group. These are practices that provide care to patients as a group, as is typical in modern medicine, with coverage rotations and care organized to most efficiently serve patients. Their schedules are set as a group, months ahead of time, and these practitioners / professors have their time organized in half-day or full-day segments that vary day to day and week to week.

31. Separate from the legal requirements discussed below, and consistent with their ethical duty, prior to inducing or performing an abortion, Plaintiffs each ensure that their patients receive all information necessary for them to fully understand the risks and benefits of abortion and alternatives to abortion, so that they are able to give informed and voluntary consent, if they choose to terminate their pregnancy. In addition, Plaintiffs and their staff give their patients multiple opportunities to ask questions and discuss any concerns prior to the abortion being induced or performed.

Existing Regulatory Framework/Informed Consent in Missouri

32. Existing Missouri law states that a physician may not proceed with an abortion unless she or he has received the woman's voluntary and informed consent. Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027; see also Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.039. And, separate from the challenged Act, Missouri already has in place extensive requirements that must be met in order for a woman's consent to an abortion to be considered legally sufficient. See Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 188.027, 188.039.

33. Under existing law, in order for a woman's consent to be considered "voluntary and informed and given freely and without coercion" under law, the woman must go to a health center to receive certain state-mandated information orally and reduced to writing, and in a private setting, at least 72 hours in advance of having an abortion. Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.1, 2. Existing law allows the information to be provided to the woman either by the physician who is to induce or perform the abortion or a qualified health professional. Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.1.

34. A "qualified professional" is defined to include physicians, physician assistants, registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, psychologists, licensed professional counselors, or licensed social workers provided that they are acting under the supervision of the physician performing or inducing the abortion, and acting within the course and scope of their authority as provided by law. Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.9.

35. Missouri Revised Statute Section 188.027.1 outlines the information that must be given to the woman at least 72 hours before an abortion may be performed. Among the information a patient must receive is: a description of the "immediate and long-term medical risks to the woman associated with the proposed abortion method" and the "immediate and long-term medical risks to the woman . . . in light of the anesthesia and medication that is to be administered [and other factors]." Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.1(1)(b)b-c.

36. Furthermore, existing Section 188.039 states that at least 72 hours before an abortion can be performed either the physician who is to perform or induce the abortion or a qualified professional must discuss with the woman “indicators and contraindicators, and risk factors . . . for the proposed procedure and the use of medications . . . in light of her medical history and medical condition . . . which would predispose [her] to or increase the risk of experiencing one or more adverse physical, emotional, or other health reactions . . . in either the short or long term . . .” Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.039.2-3. The Missouri Supreme Court has stated that § 188.039 codifies the duty to obtain informed consent from a patient prior to an abortion. Reprod. Health Servs. of Planned Parenthood of St. Louis Region, Inc. v. Nixon, 185 S.W.3d 685, 690 (Mo. 2006).

37. All of this information must be provided orally, in person, and in a private setting with the patient. If the woman chooses to proceed with the abortion, the patient must certify, on a written checklist, that she has received the state-mandated information, and either the physician who is to perform or induce the abortion or a qualified professional and the patient must sign a written statement that the woman gave her informed consent freely and without coercion. Section 188.039 also states that—to satisfy that section’s requirements—“[o]nly one such conference shall be required for each abortion.” Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.039. 2.

38. In accordance with the current law, Plaintiffs have qualified professionals (as defined by law) provide all required information orally and in writing, answer any questions she may have, and obtain the written checklist and consent from the patient, if she decides to proceed. These professionals are trained and well-versed in this role. These professionals, as is common across many areas of modern medical practice, also undertake similar counseling and consenting roles for non-abortion procedures.

39. Plaintiffs fully comply with the numerous, existing legal requirements.

S.B. 5 Same-Physician Requirement

40. The Act amends the existing requirements for abortion to state that “the physician who performs or induces an abortion” must provide certain information to the woman at least 72 hours in advance of the abortion procedure.

41. Specifically, the Act amends Missouri Revised Statutes Section 188.027, and adds a new subsection 6 that mandates that the physician who is to perform or induce an abortion personally provide to the patient, 72 hours in advance of the procedure, the “immediate and long-term medical risks to the woman associated with the proposed abortion method” and the “immediate and long-term medical risks to the woman. . . in light of the anesthesia and medication that is to be administered [and other factors].” Ex. A at 8, to be codified at Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.6.

42. This exact information verbatim is already required to be given to the woman under subsection 1 of Section 188.027. See ¶ 39. Moreover, S.B. 5 leaves unchanged the ability of a qualified professional to provide a woman with the exact same information under subsection 1 of Section 188.027. See Ex. A at 3.

43. In addition, S.B. 5 loosens the requirements of Section 188.027 by amending subsection 1 to also allow a referring physician—someone not necessarily under the supervision of the physician performing or inducing the abortion, as required for qualified professionals— to provide the exact same information.

44. One result of S.B. 5, therefore, is two conflicting subsections of Section 188.027.

45. Furthermore, S.B. 5 continues to allow a qualified professional to, and adds that a referring physician (in addition to the physician who is to perform or induce the abortion) may, be the person to provide the woman, at least 72 hours before the abortion, other state-mandated information, including a description of the proposed abortion method, § 188.027 1.(1)(b)(a.), the gestational age and anatomical characteristics of the embryo or fetus, § 188.027 1.(1)(f)-(g), and the indicators, contraindicators, and risk factors of the proposed procedure in light of her medical history and condition, § 188.039 2, 3. See Ex. A at 13-14. Section 188.039 continues to state that only one pre-procedure conference for purposes of providing information and obtaining informed consent is necessary for a given abortion.

46. Any person who performs an abortion in violation of the Act commits a class A misdemeanor, Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.075, under penalty of imprisonment of up to one year, id. § 558.011(6), and loss of a physician's license to practice medicine, id. § 188.065.

Effects of the Challenged Restriction

47. By requiring that the same physician who will induce or perform the abortion also provide specified information to the woman, and that the physician do so at least 72 hours before performing the abortion, the Act will bar certain procedures, create insurmountable obstacles for some women, and impose extreme and medically unnecessary delays for the other many women who seek abortion care in this state.

48. These denials and delays imposed by the Act will result from the diminished number of physicians available to perform abortions due to inability to devote more hours to abortion care and/or conform their schedules with the strict requirements of the Act; the impossibility of knowing for many patients which physician will "perform or induce" ahead of a prospective patient's initial state-mandated appointment; physician unavailability due to unforeseen circumstances such as a medical emergency with another patient, and/or the woman's inability to return to the facility when the physician is next scheduled due to difficulty arranging transportation and time off from work and child-care obligations; physicians' increased time spent on state-mandated informational appointments rather than abortion procedures; and the need for women to duplicate initial appointments to try to comply with the law if their first attempt with a given physician does not work.

49. A same-physician requirement for counseling and performance of the abortion would be literally impossible to fulfill for induction abortions and lead to outright denial of that care, which necessarily entails multiple physicians caring for a woman over multiple shifts.

50. The requirement would also severely cripple the provision of abortion services in Missouri, which is already severely restricted, and it is foreseeable that it will routinely cause delays of two to four weeks for some patients, if compliance is possible at all, a length of time that certainly increases the risk of the procedure.

51. As one example of delays caused by the Act, Plaintiff Dr. McNicholas can provide abortions at the Columbia Center only two to three times a month due to the myriad of other professional and personal obligations she has. Thus, some women would have to wait at least two weeks between their initial appointment at which they must receive the state-mandated information and their actual abortion procedure, not to mention the front-end delays that will occur when women first call to schedule their initial visit with Dr. McNicholas, who may not next be in the Columbia Center for weeks, let alone have available appointments when that day comes.

52. The extreme delays caused by the Act will result in some women losing access to medication abortion, which allows patients to end a pregnancy at the earliest stages without undergoing a surgical procedure, and other women will be prevented from obtaining an abortion in the state altogether, because the delay will push them past the point in pregnancy at which abortions are available.

53. Women seeking an abortion will also be forced to attempt to travel much farther distances because they cannot receive timely care at a health center that only provides abortions up to a certain point in pregnancy, such as the Columbia Center, which only provides abortions less than 15 weeks Imp.

54. In addition, currently, some of Plaintiffs' patients are able to go to a health center closer to their home to meet with a licensed, qualified professional at least 72 hours before an abortion to receive the state-mandated information, which can save a woman the extra costs, time, and burden of having to travel hundreds of miles. For example, women seeking an abortion who live in the Southwest corner of Missouri, near RHS's Springfield or Joplin health centers, are able to complete the state-mandated information visit at a RHS health center closer to home, rather than the health center in St. Louis. However, under the Act these patients will be forced to attempt to make two lengthy round trips to St. Louis, each trip amounting to 430 miles: one trip to receive the state-mandated information and a second trip, which must be at least 72 hours later, to have an abortion.

55. Low-income women will have the most difficulty in rearranging inflexible work schedules at low-wage jobs; arranging and paying for child-care; paying the travel costs for an additional trip to the clinic; foregoing lost wages for missed work; paying for any increased costs associated with a later procedure; and saving up the money required to cover any or all of these additional expenses.

56. The Act's harms are exacerbated by the lack of any apparent medical emergency exception and by the lack of any other type of exigent circumstances exception.

57. The Act will pose particular harms to other especially vulnerable populations: victims of domestic violence and those whose pregnancy is the result of rape or other forms of abuse; those who face medical risks from pregnancy; and those whose pregnancies involve a severe fetal anomaly.

58. The same-physician requirement conflicts with prevailing standards of medical practice. It is standard, accepted and ethical practice for a physician to perform a procedure for a patient whose preliminary “work-up” for the procedure, including providing information to patients about the risks of a medical procedure, has been done by a qualified professional other than the physician who will ultimately perform the procedure. It is also common practice for physicians (including those in obstetrics and gynecology) to work in group practices, in which the responsibilities for patients’ care are shared among different physicians according to a coverage schedule. The Act interferes with these common, accepted and ethical practices.

59. The Act singles out abortion patients and their providers for different and more burdensome treatment than all other patients or health care providers regulated by the state.

60. The differential treatment and special burdens imposed by the Act on physicians providing abortions include, but are not limited to precluding a physician from relying on a qualified professional to provide patients with medical risk information, and severely limiting a physician’s ability to manage his or her medical practice by requiring the physician to personally undertake, at designated time intervals, tasks that in other areas of medical care would be delegable and done on a schedule dictated by medical need and by the care givers and patient, rather than the state. These medically unnecessary restraints on the timely and efficient delivery of health care place significant obstacles in the path of women’s access to abortion.

61. The Act's differential treatment of abortion care as compared to all other health care is not rationally related to the promotion of women's health or to any other important or legitimate governmental interest, especially in light of how safe abortion is compared to other medical procedures. Indeed, the Act leaves unchanged the ability of qualified professionals to provide various pieces of information during the initial state-mandated information visit, including medical risk information.

62. The Act will also significantly, and unjustifiably, increase the costs of providing and obtaining lawful abortion services, thereby further reducing women's access to those services. Requiring that a single physician undertake (personally and in person) the host of steps that the Act requires at least 72 hours in advance of an abortion procedure will greatly undermine the efficiencies of time, costs, and scheduling that currently exist in the limited and strained Missouri abortion practice settings, to the detriment of providers and their patients.

63. The Act imposes vague and conflicting requirements as to who is allowed to provide a woman with certain information, orally and in-person, during the state-mandated information visit. The Act adds subsection 6 to Missouri Revised Statutes Section 188.027, which requires the physician who is to perform or induce the abortion to provide the woman (at least 72 hours before her abortion) the mandated information about "the immediate and long term risks to the woman," Ex. A at 8, yet subsection 1 allows a referring physician, or a qualified professional, or the physician who is to induce or perform the abortion to provide this information, id. at 3. Thus, it is unclear exactly what the Act requires and allows.

64. There is also lack of clarity about what conduct constitutes "performing" or "inducing" an abortion, and whether, in the context of abortion methods that often involve multiple steps, days, and/or providers, more than one physician must participate in providing the specified information to the patient, in person, at least 72 hours before the start of the procedure.

65. If enforced the Act will cause irreparable harm, including by infringing on constitutional rights for both providers and patients, and denying or imposing extreme delays on patients' abortion care.

Facts Related To Original Purpose Challenge

66. S.B. 5 was introduced by Senator Andrew Koenig with the title "An Act [t]o repeal section 188.075, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof one new section relating to the jurisdiction of the attorney general to enforce state abortion laws, with penalty provisions." A copy of S.B. 5, as introduced, is attached hereto as Exhibit B.

67. As introduced, the two-page bill sought solely to alter § 188.075, the law which sets forth the criminal penalty for knowing violations of the state's abortion laws. The amendment proposed in S.B. 5 as introduced gave the Missouri Attorney General original jurisdiction, concurrent with that of each prosecuting or circuit attorney in the state, to prosecute violations of other, existing state laws. Ex. B. The bill also sought to empower the Attorney General and each prosecuting or circuit attorney to seek "injunctive or other relief" as necessary in such prosecutions. Id.

68. S.B. 5 was heard in the Senate's Seniors, Families, and Children Committee on June 13, 2017, and passed out of the committee in its original form.

69. The content of S.B. 5 underwent multiple, extensive changes thereafter, becoming a 40-page mix of enactments instead of a two-page change to the Attorney General's powers. First, the Senate passed a floor substitute to the bill on June 14, 2017, entitled: "An Act [t]o repeal sections 188.030, 188.047, 188.075, 192.665, 192.667, 197.150, 197.152, 197.158, 197.160, 197.162, 197.165, 197.200, 197.205, 197.215, 197.220, 197.225, 197.230, 197.235, 197.240, 197.285, 197.287, 197.289, 197.293, 197.295, and 595.027, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof twenty-seven new sections relating to abortion, with penalty provisions and an emergency clause.”

70. The House Children and Families Committee then took up S.B. 5 and voted a substitute version out of committee. On June 20, 2017, the House passed the House Committee’s Substitute to the Senate Substitute for Senate Bill 5 with two additional amendments. One of these included amendments altered § 188.027 to add the same-physician restriction challenged here.

71. On July 25, 2017, the Senate took up the House’s amended version of S.B. 5. Without going to conference with the House to resolve the differences between the two forms of S.B. 5 they had passed, the Senate approved a “previous question” motion, cutting off debate in that chamber.

72. The bill as truly agreed to and finally passed on July 25, 2017, and later signed by Governor Greitens, repealed twenty-eight sections of the the Revised Statutes and “enact[ed] in lieu thereof thirty-one new sections relating to abortions . . . .” See Ex. A.

73. In fact, the Legislature repeatedly deviated from the original purpose of S.B. 5 and enacted a diverse set of changes to the portions of the Missouri Code that do not relate to broadening the Attorney General’s jurisdiction. The final bill includes provisions which instead relate to inter alia: preemption of the lawmaking powers of political subdivisions, state-mandated information for patients, whistleblower protections, abortion facility licensing, and a new offense of interfering with medical assistance. S.B. 5 runs afoul of the legislative accountability and transparency constitutionally guaranteed to Missouri citizens.

Count I – Substantive Due Process

74. Plaintiffs hereby incorporate by reference paragraphs 1 through 73 above.

75. The Act's same-physician requirement imposes an undue burden on women's access to abortion and, therefore, violates Article I, Section 2 and Article I, Section 10 of the Missouri Constitution.

Count II – Vagueness

76. Plaintiffs hereby incorporate by reference paragraphs 1 through 73 above.

77. Because the Act fails to give adequate notice of the conduct it proscribes, and encourages arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement, it is impermissibly vague, in violation of the due process clause of Article I, Section 10, of the Missouri Constitution.

Count III – Original Purpose

78. Plaintiffs hereby incorporate by reference paragraphs 1 through 73 above.

79. Because S.B. 5 was amended to include changes to the bill, including the same-physician requirement, that were unrelated to the original purpose of the bill, the Act violates Article III, Section 21 of the Missouri Constitution.

Count IV – Equal Protection

80. Plaintiffs hereby incorporate by reference paragraphs 1 through 73 above.

81. The Act violates the rights of Plaintiffs and their patients under the equal protection clause of Article I, Section 2, of the Missouri Constitution by treating them differently than providers and patients of all other medical services in the state without any legitimate basis.

Count V – Substantive Due Process

82. Plaintiffs hereby incorporate by reference paragraphs 1 through 73 above.

83. The 72-hour mandatory delay imposed on all patients seeking an abortion, codified at Missouri Revised Statutes Sections 188.027 and 188.039, imposes an undue burden on women's access to abortion and, therefore, violates Article I, Section 2 and Article I, Section 10 of the Missouri Constitution.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs ask this Court:

- A) To enter judgment declaring the Act violates the Missouri Constitution.
- B) To issue injunctive relief preventing Defendants, their employees, agents, and successors in office from enforcing the Act, to be codified at Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.6, and the 72-hour mandatory delay, codified at Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 188.027, 188.039, against facilities and physicians that provide abortion.
- C) To grant such other and further relief as this Court should find just, proper, and equitable.

MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER AND PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

COME NOW Plaintiffs, by counsel, and move this Court for a temporary restraining order, followed by a preliminary injunction, prohibiting enforcement of portions of Senate Bill 5, 99th General Assembly, 2nd Extraordinary Session (2017 Mo.) (“S.B. 5”), to be codified at Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.6 (“the Act”), which will take effect on October 24, 2017 absent relief from this Court. See Mo Const. art III, § 29 (A copy of S.B. 5 is annexed to the Petition as Exhibit A). Unless an immediate injunction is issued, the Act will irreparably harm Plaintiffs and their patients by violating Plaintiffs’ and their patients’ rights under the Missouri Constitution, imposing significant burdens on patient care such that care for whole categories of patients would no longer be available, and virtually all other abortion patients, if they could still access care, would experience harmful delays which expose women to increased medical risk.

In support of this motion, Plaintiffs submit Suggestions in Support of Motion of Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction, and: Affidavit of Aaron Samulcek, sworn October 10, 2017, attached thereto as Ex. 1; Affidavit of Mary M. Kogut, sworn October 10, 2017, attached thereto as Ex. 2; Affidavit of David L. Eisenberg, MD, MPH, sworn October 9, 2017, attached thereto as Ex. 3; Affidavit of George A. CASE NO. 1716-CV24109

PLAINTIFFS' SUGGESTIONS IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER AND PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

Plaintiffs seek immediate injunctive relief prohibiting enforcement of portions of Senate Bill 5, 99th General Assembly, 2nd Extraordinary Session (2017 Mo.) ("S.B. 5"), to be codified at Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.6 ("the Act"), which will take effect on October 24, 2017 absent relief from this Court. See Mo. Const. art III, § 29. In support of their motion, Plaintiffs submit these suggestions demonstrating that a temporary restraining order, followed by a preliminary injunction, should issue.

I. INTRODUCTION

Absent relief from this Court enjoining the Act from taking effect, women will be subject to an extreme set of requirements that they and their physicians must overcome so that women can exercise their right to have an abortion in the state of Missouri. Existing law already forces all women, regardless of how certain they are in their decision to have an abortion, to make an additional and medically unnecessary trip to a health center at least 72 hours before they can obtain an abortion, at which they must be given orally and in writing certain state-mandated information. The Act adds an extremely burdensome layer of medically unnecessary regulation by now mandating, not that any new information be imparted to patients, but rather that the same physician or physicians who will “perform or induce” a woman’s abortion must be the person(s) to, orally and in person, at least 72 hours in advance of her procedure, describe certain state-mandated information to patients (hereinafter “same-physician requirement”). The same-physician requirement is either impossible to implement, for some types of abortion care, or for others will dramatically reduce patients’ access to care and delay the care that can be provided. It provides no exceptions for when the patient or the physician must reschedule, provides no exception for how far a woman must travel to the health center, does not take into account that often multiple physicians on different days can be involved in a woman’s abortion care, and does not contain a medical emergency exception on its face. No other state in the nation imposes a similar requirement, and Missouri imposes no similar requirement for any medical procedure other than abortion.

The Act conflicts with other provisions of existing Missouri law, and additional amendments made by S.B. 5, that—consistent with accepted medical practice—provide for the same, state-mandated information to be provided to the patient by a physician who is to perform or induce the abortion, or by a referring physician, or by certain licensed, qualified professionals. The Act also leaves undefined certain terms which are critical to understanding the Plaintiffs’ obligations and limitations when providing abortions. As a result of the conflicting requirements, it is unclear what the Act requires and allows. Noncompliance with the Act carries serious criminal, licensing, and other penalties.

The Act is additionally unenforceable because it violates article III, section 21 of the Missouri Constitution, which prohibits legislative changes to a bill that are unrelated to the bill’s original purpose. The passage of the Act, and other provisions in S.B. 5, have resulted in a bill that unconstitutionally deviates from the original (and sole) purpose of S.B. 5, as it was introduced, which was to expand the Attorney General’s jurisdiction, but now enacts a diverse set of unrelated changes to Missouri’s code.

If the same-physician requirement takes effect it will irreparably harm Plaintiffs and their patients by imposing significant burdens on patient care such that, for whole categories of patients, abortion care would no longer be available, and for virtually all other abortion patients, it would be either unavailable or so delayed that they would experience harmful delays which carry increased medical risk and financial costs. To prevent these harms and maintain the status quo, this Court should enter preliminary injunctive relief.

II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND & STATUTORY FRAMEWORK

A. Abortion Background

Abortion is a safe and common medical procedure. Ex. 3, Affidavit of David Eisenberg ¶¶ 13–14 (hereinafter “Eisenberg Aff.”); Ex. 4, Affidavit of George Macones ¶ 6 (hereinafter “Macones Aff.”). Approximately 30% of women have an abortion by the age of 45. Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 15; Macones Aff. ¶ 6. Many are mothers already who have decided that they cannot parent another child at this time. Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 15; Ex. 5, Affidavit of Sheila Katz ¶ 33 (hereinafter “Katz Aff.”). Women may, for example, plan instead to have children (or additional children) when they are older, financially able to provide necessities for them, and/or in a supportive relationship with a partner so that their children will have two parents. See Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 15. In both the first and second trimester, abortion is safer than carrying a pregnancy to term, as to both morbidity and mortality. Macones Aff. ¶ 6; see also Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 14. While legal abortion is very safe, the medical risks do increase as pregnancy progresses. Macones Aff. ¶ 6;

Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 92. Delay in accessing abortion thus increases the risks a woman faces, including (but not only) if that delay pushes her from the first to the second trimester, when abortion typically requires a more complex procedure. Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 13, 21–25; Macones Aff. ¶ 6.

During the first trimester, there are two methods of abortion. Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 16–17, 19. For pregnancies through 10 weeks, dated from the first day of a patient’s last menstrual period (“lmp”), a patient may have an abortion using medications alone. Id. ¶ 17. In a medication abortion, the patient takes first one medication and then a second one 24-48 hours later, and then passes the products of conception, usually in her home, in a process similar to an early miscarriage. Id. The other method of first trimester abortion is a suction (or aspiration) procedure in which the physician uses instruments to open the cervix and suction out the contents of the uterus. Id. ¶ 19.

During the beginning of the second trimester, a suction procedure may continue to be a possibility. Id. In addition, throughout the second trimester, there are two other methods of abortion: dilation and evacuation (“D&E”) and induction; the vast majority of abortions performed in the second trimester are D&Es, though the induction method is an important one for those patients for whom it is appropriate. Id. ¶¶ 21, 25–26; Macones Aff. ¶¶ 9–11. D&E abortions early in the second trimester are performed as a one-day procedure, but in Missouri, by 18 weeks lmp, a D&E requires two appointments on consecutive days. Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 22–23. In induction abortions, which require hospitalization, medication is used to induce labor and, after an unpredictable period that may last up to 72 hours or more, the patient delivers the non-viable fetus. Macones Aff. ¶¶ 13–16; Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 25. On occasion, though not typically, a patient may need to have a second procedure to ensure that the abortion is completed and any further medical risks avoided. Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 28. This second procedure typically is performed by a different physician, with a different method, than initially treated the patient. Id.

There are currently only two, and soon to be three, dedicated abortion facilities in Missouri. Due to onerous legal restrictions, until recently, there was only one. Ex. 2, Affidavit of Mary Kogut ¶ 9 (hereinafter “Kogut Aff.”). That one, Plaintiff Reproductive Health Services of Planned Parenthood of the Saint Louis Region (“RHS”), provides medication abortion as well as aspiration and/or D&E abortions through 21 weeks, 6 days lmp at its St. Louis Center. Kogut Aff. ¶ 9, 22; Eisenberg ¶¶ 18, 20, 24. In 2016, RHS provided close to 4500 abortions. Kogut Aff. ¶ 5. Nearly 70 percent of the second-trimester procedures that are performed at RHS are two-day procedures. Id. ¶ 22. Plaintiff Comprehensive Health of Planned Parenthood of Great Plains (“Comprehensive Health”) recently resumed providing only medication abortion at its Midtown-Kansas City Center, and this month will resume providing medication abortion and surgical abortion at its Columbia health center. Ex. 1, Affidavit of Aaron Samulcek ¶ 5 (hereinafter “Samulcek Aff.”). In addition to these dedicated facilities, a small number of abortions are also performed in a hospital and general outpatient clinic setting. See Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 20, 24.

B. The Current Law And Plaintiffs’ Compliance With It

The Act is the most recent in a long line of attempts by the legislature to impose severe restrictions on access to abortion in Missouri. See Mo. Rev. Stat. tit. XII ch. 188; Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.010 (“It is the intent of the general assembly of the state of Missouri . . . to regulate abortion to the full extent permitted by the Constitution . . .”). The state subjects abortion providers to inspections, licensing, reporting obligations, and detailed requirements for providing care to minors. Separate from this case, ongoing litigation challenges a number of other Missouri restrictions, similar to those enacted by Texas and recently struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court, which unduly interfere with the Planned Parenthood Plaintiffs' ability to provide accessible abortion services throughout the state. Kogut Aff. ¶ 9; Samulcek Aff. ¶¶ 3, 5.

All medical providers are bound by their ethical obligations and professional standards of care to ensure that all patients receive relevant information and provide their voluntary, informed consent before treatment. See Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 29; Macones Aff. ¶ 22. Abortion providers take that obligation very seriously. See Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 31; Macones Aff. ¶¶ 22–25, 39–42; Kogut Aff. ¶ 12; Samulcek Aff. ¶¶ 9–10. Missouri's abortion law codifies the need for voluntary, informed consent. See Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.1 (“no abortion shall be performed or induced ... without [patient's] voluntary and informed consent, given freely and without coercion.”); see also §188.027.3, .5; § 188.039 (interpreted by Missouri Supreme Court to codify duty to obtain informed consent, see Reprod. Health Servs. of Planned Parenthood of St. Louis Region, Inc. v. Nixon, 185 S.W.3d 685, 691 (Mo. 2006)).

Missouri law then goes further to mandate that specific information be provided and in exactly what manner, including when it must occur: at least 72 hours prior to any abortion procedure, see Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 188.027, 188.039, a requirement imposed in 2014 that tripled the previous 24-hour mandatory delay.<sup>1</sup> Among the information a patient must receive is: a description of the “immediate and long-term medical risks associated with the proposed abortion method” and the “immediate and long-term medical risks. . . in light of the anesthesia and medication that is to be administered [and other factors].” Id. § 188.027.1(1)(b)b-c. This information, and other information required by §§ 188.027, 188.039, must be provided orally, in person, and in a private setting with the patient.<sup>2</sup> The patient must certify, on a written checklist, that she has received the state-mandated information and must further certify her free and voluntary consent. Section 188.039.2 also states that—to satisfy that section’s requirements— “[o]nly one such conference shall be required for each abortion.”

Under existing law, either a physician who will perform or induce the abortion or any other “qualified professional” can provide the above required information and obtain a patient’s required written consent. Id. §§ 188.027.1(1), (3); 188.039.2-.6. The term “qualified professional” includes “a physician, physician assistant, registered nurse, licensed practical nurse, psychologist, licensed professional counselor, or licensed social worker,” licensed or registered under the relevant chapters of Missouri law, “acting under the supervision of the physician performing or inducing the abortion, and acting within the course and scope of his or her authority provided by law.” Id. § 188.027.9 (amended by Act to be codified at § 188.027.10).

In accordance with the current law, abortion providers in Missouri have a licensed registered nurse or other qualified professional (as defined by law) provide the state-mandated information, who ensures that the prospective patient has all required information orally and in writing, answers any questions she may have, and obtains the written checklist and consent from the patient, if she decides to proceed. Kogut Aff. ¶ 12; Samulcek Aff. ¶ 9; Eisenberg ¶ 33. These licensed, qualified professionals are trained and well-versed in this role, and acting under the supervision of the physicians on the facility's staff. Id. These professionals, as is common across many areas of modern medical practice, also undertake similar counseling and consenting roles for non-abortion procedures, such as the insertion of an IUD or a surgical procedure for miscarriage management. Eisenberg ¶ 33; Kogut Aff. ¶ 12. This model allows physicians to fully and efficiently allocate their resources, providing patients with ongoing access to care and effectively spreading those resources among not only abortion care, but also their gynecological and other care for patients and their other professional obligations. Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶32, 62, 65; Macones Aff. ¶¶ 25–27.

<sup>2</sup> Current law further specifies that the patient must receive “[m]edically accurate information that a reasonable patient would consider material to the decision of whether or not to undergo the abortion,” including a description of the abortion methods “relevant to the stage of pregnancy, as well as the immediate and long-term medical risks commonly associated with each abortion method . . . .” Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.1(3); see also id. § 188.039.2 (requiring discussion of a patient’s “indicators and contraindicators, and risk factors including any physical, psychological, or situational factors for the proposed procedure . . .”). This information must also be provided in written form, through documents created by the state itself. id. §§ 188.027.1(2)-(3), (5)-(7); see also id. § 188.027.2.

By providing the required information and consultation appointment through nurses and other qualified professional staff, RHS and Comprehensive Health are able to see local patients for their initial appointment in one location close to their home, and then have the patient travel farther only for the actual abortion procedure. Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 11, 42; Eisenberg ¶ 34. This can save a patient from having to make two lengthy trips to the abortion facility; for example, a patient who lives close to Springfield can avoid a second 400+ mile trip. Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 11, 41–42. In addition, the use of qualified professionals saves limited physician resources for treating patient's gynecological needs or performing the abortions. See Kogut ¶¶ 38–39; Eisenberg ¶ 34; Samulcek Aff. ¶¶ 17; 21.

C. The Act Adds Conflicting, Unclear Requirements

The Act leaves each of the above requirements of existing law in place, but then adds a new subsection 6 to Section 188.027. The new subsection 6 adds a requirement that “the physician performing or inducing the abortion” must meet with the patient, in person, at least 72 hours before the start of the procedure, to orally describe “the immediate and long-term medical risks to the women associated with the proposed abortion method” and the “immediate and long-term medical risks . . . in light of the anesthesia and medication that is to be administered”—the very same information, verbatim, that is already covered by the existing requirement in Section 188.027.1(1)(b)b-c. Thus, the Act provides no new information to abortion patients, but instead duplicates the law’s pre-existing information requirements.

The Act also leaves unchanged the ability of “any qualified professional” to provide that same information (in addition to other mandated information) under subsection 1 of Section 188.027, and does not explain whether subsection 1 or subsection 6 takes precedence—creating confusion and leaving clinicians uncertain of how to proceed. Moreover, the Act and S.B. 5 as a whole not only keep in place the option to have a “qualified professional” provide the state-mandated information and obtain written consent, but also adds the option of a “referring physician,” who need not be affiliated at all with the physicians or other clinicians who will eventually provide the patient’s abortion care, to provide this same medical risk information and obtain written consent.

The result is an extreme lack of clarity as to who must provide the information and what the legislature truly intended. Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶73–76; Macones Aff. ¶¶ 35–36; Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 18–20; Samulcek Aff. ¶¶ 11–12. Because medical professionals and facilities face serious penalties for any abortion that does not fully comply with state legal requirements, however, clinicians must err on the side of reading these conflicting and confusing provisions as requiring the most stringent, same-physician counseling to occur: that is, that any physician who will perform or induce an abortion must himself or herself meet in person with the patient 72 hours ahead of time, and relay the specified risk information, and that the use of another physician, whether referring or otherwise, or another qualified professional is insufficient. Eisenberg ¶ 76; Macones Aff. ¶ 36.

There is also lack of clarity about what conduct constitutes “performing” or “inducing” an abortion, and whether, in the context of abortion methods that often involve multiple steps, days, and/or physicians, more than one physician must participate in providing the specified information to the patient, in person, at least 72 hours before the start of the procedure. Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 77; Macones Aff. ¶ 35; Kogut Aff. ¶ 21. Neither “perform” nor “induce” are defined. It is unclear, what, if any, medical emergency exception might apply to this new section. See Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 78. In addition, the Act has no exigent circumstances exception, nor any other apparent means of sparing a patient from having to repeat both the state-mandated in person meeting and the minimum 72-hour delay, if the physician who provided the state-mandated information to a patient ultimately cannot perform her abortion. Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 79. For example, this situation may arise if the patient ends up needing or choosing a different method of abortion than that physician can provide, if the patient and physician schedules simply cannot be coordinated once the mandatory information is provided, or if some last-minute obstacle arises either for the physician or the patient. Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 79; Kogut Aff. ¶ 36; Samulcek Aff. ¶ 15. Section 188.039 continues to state that only one pre-procedure conference for purposes of providing information and obtaining informed consent is necessary for a given abortion, but the new same-physician requirement would make it highly likely that, in numerous common scenarios, two or more such in-person meetings would have to take place before a patient’s abortion could begin (assuming the attendant delays had not pushed her past the cutoff for her procedure). As explained below, this is just one aspect of the lack of feasibility of a same-physician requirement and the harms that the Act threatens, if allowed to take effect.

D. The Impact of the Act on Plaintiffs' and Their Patients

As the attached sworn affidavits in support of this application describe in detail, Plaintiffs already struggle to provide adequate abortion access to Missouri women. See Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 41–54; Kogut Aff. ¶ 7; Samulcek Aff. ¶¶ 3, 5. There are no Missouri physicians who work full time in abortion care. Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 44; Kogut Aff. ¶ 7. Instead, the limited care available takes place at a few facilities through a rotating patchwork of coverage by dedicated physicians who have many other obligations, and can devote only discrete, finite hours each month—scheduled long in advance and typically not the same hours each week or month for the same physician at the same facility—to treating abortion patients. Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 48–62; Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 7, 29–34; Samulcek Aff. ¶¶ 6–7. In addition to their varied clinical duties, many of the physicians providing these services have numerous other responsibilities, including teaching, research, and administration, and treat abortion patients on certain days—all according to complex schedules set for months-long periods and finalized months in advance. Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 49–52; Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 30–33; Samulcek Aff. ¶ 7. RHS, for example, must fill in other coverage at its St. Louis Center with multiple Missouri physicians, plus some physicians who live out of state, all of whom can devote only a limited number of hours to abortion care. Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 30–33; Eisenberg ¶¶ 53–54. It is a constant struggle to secure and maintain physician coverage there. Id. At the Midtown-Kansas City Center, only one physician is able to provide medication abortions. Samulcek Aff. ¶ 6. The shortage of abortion physicians in Missouri follows from the harassment, threats, and hyper-regulation associated with abortion practice. Kogut Aff. ¶ 8; Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 46–47.

At the same time as these facilities and physicians must stretch to maintain even the current, limited availability of abortion options in Missouri, women seeking abortions, who tend disproportionately to be of very limited means, struggle to schedule care with, pay for, and travel to these providers. Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 43–44; Samulcek Aff. ¶ 18; Katz Aff. ¶¶ 19–38. These women often have limited options for transportation, time off work, child care, and ways to manage or pay for other logistical requirements to access abortion care, and that may only be available far from their homes. See Katz Aff. ¶¶ 22–38. In 2014, 49% of women having abortions in the United States had incomes below the federal poverty level, and another 25.7% had incomes below 200% of the federal poverty level. Id. ¶ 20. Missouri’s poverty rate is higher than in the United States as a whole, and poverty is particularly concentrated in the southern part of the state. Id. ¶ 12. More than 70% of the patients who obtain abortions at RHS are low-income. Kogut Aff. ¶44. As the affidavit of Sheila M. Katz, Ph.D., shows, the majority of prospective abortion patients in Missouri face significant financial, logistical, and social psychological challenges in reaching providers, paying for abortion, and completing their desired care. Katz Aff. ¶¶ 19–38. Even without the new same-physician requirement, it is often the case that a procedure initially scheduled for one day may have to be rescheduled because of the practical constraints that Plaintiffs’ patients face. Id. ¶ 41.

The Act will greatly exacerbate these scheduling difficulties—for both Plaintiffs and their patients—resulting in increased travel distances and extraordinarily long delays for patients which will in turn subject them to greater medical risks, if they can access care at all. While Plaintiffs will do their best to accommodate women in need, because of the limited availability of physicians, the two separate visits may need to be, not 72 hours apart, but weeks apart. Samulcek Aff. ¶ 16; Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 34–37. As a result, some women will not succeed in making it through all these hoops to actually receive an abortion. See Samulcek Aff. ¶ 19; Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 28, 40, 46. Other women will be forced to attempt to travel much farther distances because they cannot receive timely care at a health center that only provides abortions up to a certain point in pregnancy. Samulcek Aff. ¶ 18–19. In addition, women will lose the ability to do the state-mandated information visit with a qualified professional at a health center closer to their home, meaning that some women will be forced to make two lengthy trips (each trip hundreds of miles): one trip to receive the state-mandated information from the physician who will perform the abortion and a second trip, which must be at least 72 hours later, to have the abortion. See Kogut Aff. ¶ 42; Samulcek Aff. ¶ 20. Moreover, because the Act will require all providing physicians to split their time between abortion procedures and counseling, much more limited physician time will be available for the procedures themselves. See Kogut Aff. ¶ 38; Samulcek Aff. ¶ 17; Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 81–82. For induction abortions, which unpredictably span over days in the hospital, there is no possible means of using a “same physician” approach, and the Act would effectively bar those procedures. Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 83; Macones Aff. ¶¶ 31–34. The Act also cannot be reconciled at all with those circumstances where a medication or induction abortion is incomplete, and the patient needs a prompt suction or D&E procedure performed by a different doctor than originally contemplated in her care. Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 28; Macones Aff. ¶ 14. All of these burdens, and the costs associated with them, will mean that more women in Missouri will be unable to access abortion at all.

At the same time as the Act would impose these burdens, its same-physician requirement is a medically-unnecessary requirement that departs from modern medical practice and standards of care. Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 66–72; Macones Aff. ¶¶ 37–43. The practice of having one qualified professional meeting in person with a prospective abortion patient, counseling her about her options, informing her of all relevant medical information, and answering her questions, as practiced by Plaintiffs, already fully complies with medical and ethical best practices. Id. The structuring of modern medical practice in this way, which involves a team approach to delivering health care, avoids patient delays, limits physicians and other clinicians to physically manageable shifts, and provides effective continuity of patient care. Id. Indeed, no similar Missouri law applies to any other area of medicine. That is to say, in no other area of medicine, even for procedures that carry far higher risks, is a physician in Missouri prohibited from enlisting qualified staff or another physician to aid in providing information to a patient prior to the patient providing voluntary and informed consent. Id.

F. The Act's Passage

When S.B. 5 was introduced, the two-page bill's initial title was: "An Act [t]o repeal section 188.075, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof one new section relating to the jurisdiction of the attorney general to enforce state abortion laws, with penalty provisions." The bill contained one new subsection: § 188.075.3. True to its title, the new subsection 3 gave the Missouri Attorney General original jurisdiction, concurrent with that of each prosecuting or circuit attorney in the state, to prosecute violations of existing state laws that regulate abortion providers. After passing out of committee in its original form, S.B. 5 underwent numerous expansions on the Senate floor, with a variety of disparate provisions added, in the House Children and Families Committee, and finally on the floor of the House. The House's amended version of the House Committee's Substitute for the Senate Substitute for S.B. 5 was then passed by the Senate and became the version of S.B. 5 truly agreed to and finally passed by the General Assembly and signed by Governor Greitans.

The final title of S.B. 5 was "An Act [t]o repeal sections 188.021, 188.027, 188.030, 188.039, 188.047, 188.075, 192.665, 192.667, 197.150, 197.152, 197.158, 197.160, 197.162, 197.165, 197.200, 197.205, 197.215, 197.220, 197.225, 197.230, 197.235, 197.240, 197.285, 197.287, 197.289, 197.293, 197.295, and 595.027, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof thirty-one new sections relating to abortions, with penalty provisions.” As explained in more detail below, see infra Part III.A.3, the final version of S.B. 5 is replete with sections, including the Act, that do not share the limited original purpose of S.B. 5 as it was introduced: to give the Missouri Attorney General jurisdiction to prosecute violations of existing state laws that regulate abortion providers.

III. ARGUMENT

PLAINTIFFS ARE ENTITLED TO A TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER AND A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

The purpose of a temporary injunction is “to preserve the status quo until the trial court adjudicates the merits of the claim for a permanent injunction.” State ex rel. Myers Mem’l Airport Comm., Inc. v. City of Carthage, 951 S.W.2d 347, 350 (Mo. Ct. App. 1997). In deciding a motion for a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction, the trial court weighs “the movant’s probability of success on the merits, the threat of irreparable harm to the movant absent the injunction, the balance between this harm and the injury that the injunction’s issuance would inflict on other interested parties, and the public interest.” State ex rel. Dir. of Revenue v. Gabbert, 925 S.W.2d 838, 839 (Mo. 1996) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted); see also Minana v. Monroe, 467 S.W.3d 901, 907 (Mo. Ct. App. 2015). Although “[n]o single factor in itself is dispositive,” United Indus. Corp. v. Clorox Co., 140 F.3d 1175, 1179 (8th Cir. 1998), some showing of probability of success is required, Gabbert, 925 S.W.2d at 839; CitiMortgage, Inc. v. Just Mortg., Inc., No. 4:09 CV 1909 DDN, 2013 WL 6538680, at *3 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 13, 2013). In addition, the movant must supply some evidence supporting each of these considerations, however, the inquiry is “flexible” and should not be accomplished with “mathematical precision.” Gabbert, 925 S.W.2d at 840 (quoting Dataphase Sys., Inc. v. C L Sys., Inc., 640 F.2d 109, 113 (8th Cir. 1981)). As explained below, all of these factors weigh in Plaintiffs' favor.

A. PROBABILITY OF SUCCESS ON THE MERITS WEIGHS IN FAVOR OF AN INJUNCTION

1. COUNT 1: Plaintiffs Are Likely to Succeed in Demonstrating that a Same-Physician Requirement Violates Their Patients' Due Process Rights Under the Missouri Constitution

“Claimed violations of a right to personal privacy, to procreate, and similar rights not specifically set out in the constitution but inherent in the concept of ordered liberty are analyzed under substantive due process principles.” Doe v. Phillips, 194 S.W.3d 833, 843 (Mo. 2006) (citing inter alia Albright v. Oliver, 510 U.S. 266, 272 (1994) (generally applied to “matters relating to marriage, family, procreation, and the right to bodily integrity”) (citing Planned Parenthood of Se. Pennsylvania v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 850 (1992))). The Missouri Supreme Court has previously declined the invitation to interpret the due process clause more broadly than the comparable federal constitutional provision in the context of the cases that were before them. See Phillips, 194 S.W.3d at 841 (“The Court rejects the Does’ invitation to interpret the Missouri due process, equal protection or ex post facto clauses more broadly than comparable federal constitutional provisions here.” (emphasis added)); Reprod. Health Servs., 185 S.W.3d at 692 (“There is no reason, within the context of this case, to construe this language from the Missouri constitution more broadly than the language used in the United States constitution.” (emphasis added)). Rather, in prior cases, the Court has chosen to apply the due process clause “consistently with [its] interpretation under federal law.” Phillips, 194 S.W.3d at 841; see also Reprod. Health Servs., 185 S.W.3d at 691–92 (rejecting challenge under the Missouri Constitution to a 24 hour mandatory delay law (citing Casey, 505 U.S. at 877)); cf. Kansas City Premier Apartments, Inc. v. Mo. Real Estate Comm’n, 344 S.W.3d 160, 169 n.4 (Mo. 2011).

Although Plaintiffs maintain that the Missouri Constitution confers greater privacy and liberty rights than are conferred by the United States Constitution, it is not necessary for this Court to decide that question at this stage because it is plain that the Act fails even if the Court applies the due process clause “consistently with [its] interpretation under federal law.”<sup>3</sup>

As the Missouri Supreme Court has recognized, “[a] state may not impose an ‘undue burden’ on a woman’s decision to have an abortion before fetal viability.” Planned Parenthood of Kansas v. Nixon, 220 S.W.3d 732, 743 (Mo. 2007) (citing Casey, 505 U.S. at 876–77)). An undue burden exists if a state “place[s] a substantial obstacle in the path of a woman seeking an abortion.” Id. In Whole Woman’s Health v. Hellerstedt, the U.S. Supreme Court recently stressed that the undue burden standard requires a court to balance “the burdens a law imposes on abortion access together with the benefits those laws confer.” 136 S. Ct. 2292, 2309 (2016) (citing Casey, 505 U.S. at 887). Moreover, in assessing the benefits as well as the burdens, a court must consider the actual evidence and not merely defer to legislative findings or the government’s speculation. Whole Woman’s Health, 136 S. Ct. at 2309 (it “is wrong to equate the judicial review applicable to the regulation of a constitutionally protected personal liberty with the less strict review applicable where, for example, economic legislation is at issue”).

Under these principles, cf. Phillips, 194 S.W.3d at 841, the Act’s same-physician requirement does not provide women any benefits. As current law reflects, and as it has for a number of years, see Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 188.027, 188.039, abortion patients—like patients receiving other medical treatment—need not receive pre-procedure information about risks from the exact same clinician(s) who will be involved in subsequent stages of their care. On the contrary, it is common and within the standard of care in many types of patient care, including much riskier types of care than abortion, for one qualified professional to counsel and obtain informed consent from a patient, and then for other clinicians to subsequently provide the chosen procedure. See Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 66–72. Nor is there any evidence of the need for the Act, as women having abortions in Missouri have been able to give full and informed consent after receiving information about risks from a qualified and licensed professional other than the same physician who will induce or perform their abortion. Cf. Whole Woman’s Health, 136 S. Ct. at 2311–12 (noting the absence of evidence demonstrating the existence of a problem the challenged statute would solve); see also Planned Parenthood of Ind. & Ky., Inc. v. Comm’r, Ind. State Dep’t of Health, No. 1:16–cv–01807, 2017 WL 1197308, at *20 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2017) (“The relevant question is whether the . . . law provides the asserted benefits as compared to the prior law.” (citing Whole Woman’s Health, 136 S. Ct. at 2311, 2314)). Indeed, the challenged Act appears to recognize that other qualified professionals including referring physicians are fully capable of both providing patients with information regarding the medical care they are seeking and obtaining a woman’s informed and voluntary consent. See supra Part II.C.<sup>4</sup> No other state in the nation imposes as extreme a requirement as the challenged Act, and Missouri imposes no similar requirements on any other medical care, including procedures that carry far more risks, see Macones Aff. ¶¶ 37–41; Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 71.

<sup>4</sup> While Plaintiffs maintain that abortion patients can and should be able to provide informed consent in the same manner as patients seeking all other medical procedures—on the same day as the procedure and without state-mandated information—those issues are not presented in this motion. Plaintiffs at this time request the Court only to maintain the status quo and enjoin the same-physician requirement.

On the other side of the balance, the same-physician requirement will impose enormous burdens on abortion access. As an initial matter, a same-physician requirement for counseling and performance of the abortion would be literally impossible to fulfill for induction abortions and lead to outright denial of that care. The requirement would also severely cripple the provision of other abortion services in Missouri. See supra Part II.D. The Act would diminish both the number of physicians available to perform abortions, already scarce due to other legal restrictions, and the resources of the physicians who continue to provide abortion in Missouri, who would have to divert a portion of their limited time away from the provision of abortion and other gynecological procedures. See Kogut Aff. ¶ 38; Samulcek Aff. ¶ 17; Eisenberg Aff. ¶¶ 81–82. This will both raise the cost of the procedure and lead to significant delays (beyond the 72 hour mandatory delay). If the Act is allowed to take effect, it is foreseeable that it will routinely cause delays of two to four weeks for some patients, if compliance is possible at all, a length of time that certainly increases the medical risk (and in many cases, the cost) of the procedure.<sup>5</sup> Samulcek Aff. ¶ 16; Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 34–37; Eisenberg Aff. ¶ 83; Macones Aff. ¶¶ 31–34. Delays of this length will mean, for example, that some women will be unable to access medication abortion, despite preferring that method, and others will find themselves past the time when they can legally obtain an abortion at all.

Some of Plaintiffs’ patients, who currently are able to go to a health center closer to their home to meet with a qualified professional at least 72 hours before an abortion, Kogut Aff. ¶ 42; see also Samulcek Aff. ¶ 20, will be particularly burdened. They will now be forced to travel instead to the health center where they will have their abortion to receive the state-mandated information from the physician who is to perform their abortion. This will require some women to make two round trips of hundreds of miles to have an abortion because, due to other legal restrictions, abortion services are currently only offered at limited health centers, and not all health centers provide both medication and surgical abortion services, Samulcek Aff. ¶ 18; indeed, surgical abortions through 22 weeks are performed only in St. Louis. Kogut Aff. ¶ 41–42. Thus, for example, whereas currently women in the Joplin and Springfield areas are only required to make one 400+ mile round-trip to St. Louis by doing their first visit at RHS’s Springfield Center, under the Act these women would have to travel a minimum of 800 miles total to have an abortion. Kogut Aff. ¶ 42. This will impose an enormous burden on a woman’s ability to exercise her right to have an abortion.

The burdens caused by the Act will disproportionately impact the Plaintiffs’ low-income patients, who constitute a significant portion of patients receiving abortion services, women who are victims of abuse, and those with medical conditions. See Katz Aff. ¶¶ 19–21; Kogut Aff. ¶¶ 44–45; Samulcek Aff. ¶ 18.

Other courts have recognized that these sorts of burdens (especially when they are so unjustifiable) are undue. See, e.g., Whole Woman’s Health, 136 S. Ct. at 2313 (holding abortion restrictions led to scheduling constraints, longer wait times, and increased driving distance, which supported finding of undue burden); Planned Parenthood of Wis., Inc. v. Schimel, 806 F.3d 908, 920 (7th Cir. 2015), cert. denied, 136 S. Ct. 2545 (2016) (holding abortion restriction endangered women’s health by increasing wait time and causing women to delay abortions); Planned Parenthood of Ind. & Ky., Inc., 2017 WL 1197308 at *7, *25 (preliminarily enjoining law that would require many women to travel hundreds of miles to their informed-consent appointments and that such travel is especially difficult for low-income women); Planned Parenthood Se., Inc. v. Strange, 33 F. Supp. 3d 1330, 1377–78 (M.D. Ala.), as supplemented, 33 F. Supp. 3d 1381 (M.D. Ala. Oct. 20 2014), and amended, 2014 WL 5426891 (M.D. Ala. Oct. 24, 2014) (permanently enjoining restriction in part because it would force women to travel farther, which would cause some women to forgo abortion and others to delay their abortions, while imposing significant financial and other costs on remaining women).

While the Missouri Supreme Court upheld under Casey a challenge to a prior version of section 188.039, which required that a patient be provided certain state-mandated information at least 24 hours prior to having an abortion, see Reprod. Health Servs., 185 S.W.3d at 691, the Act challenged here is far more extreme. First, the Act requires the same physician who is later to perform or induce the abortion to provide certain state-mandated information to a patient, and to do so in person, at the beginning of the mandatory delay period, while the law at issue in Reproductive Health Services, 185 S.W.3d at 687–88, required only that “a treating physician” provide the relevant information. Second, the Act requires that the state-mandated information be provided by the physician who is to perform or induce the abortion at least 72 hours before the abortion—which is far more onerous than the 24-hour mandatory delay requirement that was at issue in Reproductive Health Services. The existing 72-hour mandatory delay is burdensome in and of itself, but, as Plaintiffs have demonstrated, the Act’s same-physician restriction will greatly increase this mandatory delay period, further delaying or preventing women from obtaining abortions. See supra Part II.D. Third, and relatedly, Plaintiffs have presented evidence of significant additional burdens, including that the Act would substantially reduce access to not only surgical abortion, but to the noninvasive option of medication abortion as well, and would end induction abortion procedures. Id.

Indeed, no court in the country has upheld a law as extreme as the Act. Plaintiffs are only aware of two other states, Texas and South Dakota, that require the “same physician” to provide the relevant state-mandated information.<sup>6</sup> Texas’s law not only has only a 24-hour waiting period, but the requirement is also reduced to two hours if the woman travels from more than 100 miles away. Tex. Health & Safety Code Ann. § 171.012(a)(4). And South Dakota’s law has an exception for “serious unforeseen circumstances” that prevent the same physician from taking the consent and performing the abortion. S.D. Codified Laws § 34-23A-57. In short, the burdens that the Act imposes are wholly unprecedented and medically unnecessary, and impermissibly burden access to abortion. Plaintiffs are therefore likely to succeed in demonstrating that the Act violates patients’ rights guaranteed by the Missouri Constitution.

2. COUNT 2: Plaintiffs Are Likely to Succeed in Demonstrating that the Act is Void for Vagueness

The Act also violates the constitutional rights of Plaintiffs and their staff because it is impermissibly vague. A statute is unconstitutionally vague if it fails to provide (1) notice to the ordinary person of what conduct is prohibited or (2) standards to those enforcing the law so as to prevent arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. City of Festus v. Werner, 656 S.W.2d 286, 287 (Mo. Ct. App. 1983) (holding municipal ordinance “too vague to be enforceable or constitutional”). “Where . . . the statutory terms are of such uncertain meaning, or so confused that the courts cannot discern with reasonable certainty what is intended, the statute is void.” Bd. of Educ. of St. Louis v. State, 47 S.W.3d 366, 369 (Mo. 2001) (holding statute unconstitutionally void for vagueness) (citation omitted). Moreover, a law that “threatens to inhibit the exercise of constitutionally protected rights,” State ex rel. Nixon v. Telco Directory Publ’g, 863 S.W.2d 596,

600 (Mo. 1993) (en banc) (citation and quotation marks omitted), and imposes criminal penalties on individual behavior for noncompliance, State v. Shaw, 847 S.W.2d 768, 774 (Mo. 1993) (en banc), requires greater clarity. See also id. (“[t]he possibility of criminal sanctions heightens the stakes and necessarily sharpens the focus of the constitutional analysis.”).

The challenged Act is void for vagueness because it imposes conflicting requirements on physicians who provide abortions, under the threat of criminal and licensing penalties, and fails to provide sufficient guidance as to what is required of them under the Act in the following ways:

First, existing law states that a physician may not perform an abortion unless a patient has provided informed consent as specified in Missouri Revised Statutes Section 188.027. As discussed above, supra Part II.C., the Act amends existing law and adds conflicting language regarding who is allowed to provide a woman with the state-mandated information in order to comply with the Missouri law. Namely, the Act adds a new subsection 6 to Missouri Revised Statutes Section 188.027, which states that the physician who will “perform or induce” a woman’s abortion must be the same person(s) to, orally and in person and at least 72 hours in advance of her procedure, provide information about “the immediate and long term risks to the woman,” Pet. Ex. A at 8, yet the Act leaves unchanged subsection 1 which allows a referring physician, or a qualified professional, or the physician who is to induce or perform the abortion to provide this exact same information, id. at 3. Thus, it is unclear what the Act requires and allows, and specifically whether it is legally sufficient for a qualified professional or a referring physician to provide information about risks to the woman at the state-mandated visit.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>7</sup> The Act’s changes to Missouri Revised Statutes Section 188.039 cause further confusion. The Act amends Section 188.039 to add that a referring physician (in addition to a qualified professional, or the physician who is to perform or induce the abortion) may provide the woman

Second, the Act lacks clarity as to what is required when an abortion involves more than one provider and multiple steps over the course of more than one day, which is a common occurrence for second trimester abortions and absolutely necessary for inductions, which can span numerous days. Neither “perform” nor “induce” are defined, and thus Plaintiffs are left to guess as to their meaning as applied to the Act’s same-physician requirement. For example, in the context of procedures that require dilation over the course of one or two days, must the physician who begins the dilation of the cervix be the person who provided the woman with the state-mandated information at least 72 hours prior? Or must it be the physician who performs the abortion? Or both? And if the abortion spans numerous days, as is the case for inductions, must every physician involved in the woman’s care have provided her with the state-mandated information 72 hours before the beginning of her procedure? The Act provides zero guidance as to which physician must have provided the patient with the information in these common scenarios. Similarly, the Act is silent as to whether a physician who, training under the supervision of an attending physician, may also be involved in a patient’s abortion procedure, which is the case at least once a week at RHS, must also be present during the state-mandated information visit with the attending physician. Nor does the Act provide any guidance as to how physicians should handle the very common scenario where a patient must reschedule her with the state-mandated information required by Section 188.039. This statute, as stated above, has been interpreted by the Missouri Supreme Court to codify the duty to obtain a patient’s informed consent, which necessarily involves providing information about risks. See Reprod. Health Servs., 185 S.W.3d at 693. Thus, Section 188.039 and subsection 1 of Section 188.027 both suggest that information about risks may be provided to the woman by a qualified professional, or a referring physician, or the physician who is to perform or induce the abortion.

procedure appointment or a physician becomes unable to perform a specific patient's previously scheduled procedure.<sup>8</sup>

The Act thus fails to provide Plaintiffs with “notice . . . of what is prohibited” so that Plaintiffs and their staffs may act accordingly. City of Festus, 656 S.W.2d at 287. “[T]he statutory terms are of such uncertain meaning, [and] so confused” that it cannot be “discern[ed] with reasonable certainty what is intended . . . .” Bd. of Educ. of St. Louis, 47 S.W.3d at 371 (internal quotations and citations omitted). Because Plaintiffs cannot determine what conduct will incur the Act's severe criminal and licensing penalties and what conduct will not, Plaintiffs will be chilled in their conduct in providing abortions. For all these reasons, Plaintiffs are likely to succeed in demonstrating that the Act is unconstitutionally vague. See Telco Directory Publ'g, 863 S.W.2d at 600 (most important factor affecting the clarity that the Constitution demands of a law, is “whether [the law] threatens to inhibit the exercise of constitutionally protected rights” (citation omitted)).

3. COUNT 3: Plaintiffs are Likely to Succeed in Demonstrating that S.B. 5 was Unconstitutionally Amended to Change Its Original Purpose

Because the final version of S.B. 5 includes numerous provisions that stray far beyond the bill's original purpose, Plaintiffs are likely to succeed in demonstrating that the bill, and specifically the Act, was passed in violation of the Missouri Constitution. Article III, Section 21 of the Missouri Constitution prohibits the General Assembly from passing a bill that has been <sup>8</sup> Tellingly, not even the sponsor of S.B. 5 (which was later amended to add the same-physician restriction see infra), seems to have understood the bill to require that the same physician provide both the abortion and the state-mandated information. See Jason Rosenbaum, “New Abortion Regulations Headed to Missouri Governor, Ending 2nd Special Session,” KCUR St. Louis Public Radio (July 25, 2017) (<http://kcur.org/post/new-abortion-regulations-headed-missouri-governor-ending-2nd-special-session#stream/0>) (“Requiring a doctor to meet the 72-hour waiting period is something that's common sense. It's common medical practice to do that,” [Senator] Koenig said after the bill passed.” (emphasis added)).

“so amended in its passage through either house as to change its original purpose.” “Original purpose refers to the general purpose of the bill.” Mo. Ass’n of Club Execs. v. State, 208 S.W.3d 885, 888 (Mo. 2006). Section 21 “prohibits the introduction of a matter that is not germane to the object of the legislation or that is unrelated to its original subject.” Lebeau v. Comm’rs of Franklin Cnty., Mo., 422 S.W.3d 284, 289 (Mo. 2014) (internal quotation omitted). As the Missouri Supreme Court has explained, amendments are “clearly and undoubtedly not germane” if they are not “relevant to or closely allied with a bill’s original purpose.” Trout v. State, 231 S.W.3d 140, 144 (Mo. 2007) (internal quotation and alteration omitted).

To determine whether a bill violates section 21, a court must first identify the bill’s original purpose as “established by the bill’s ‘earliest title and contents’ at the time the bill is introduced.” Legends Bank v. State, 361 S.W.3d 383, 386 (Mo. 2012) (quoting Club Execs., 208 S.W.3d at 888). “The second analytical step is to compare the original purpose with the final version of [the bill].” Id.

S.B. 5 started as a simple, two-page bill aimed at bringing an area of existing law within the ambit of the Missouri Attorney General’s original jurisdiction. Bill sponsor Senator Andrew Koenig had previously introduced an identical version of the bill as S.B. 196 at the start of the 2017 regular session of the General Assembly.<sup>9</sup> After the bill failed to advance during the regular session, Senator Koenig reintroduced it with identical language as S.B. 5 during the second <sup>9</sup> In fact, Senator Koenig has been pursuing extension of the Attorney General’s jurisdiction since before he was sworn in as a first-term senator. On December 8, 2016—even before the first day of the General Assembly’s 99th Session—then-Representative Koenig prefiled S.B. 196, entitled “an Act to repeal section 188.075, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof one new section relating to the jurisdiction of the attorney general to enforce state abortion laws, with penalty provisions.” S.B. 196, 99th Gen. Assemb., Reg. Sess. (Mo. 2017). S.B. 196 was formally introduced on the first day of the session, on January 4, 2017. But for the bill number, Senator Koenig’s S.B. 5 as introduced mirrors S.B. 196 verbatim. Compare Pet. Ex. B, with S.B. 196, 99th Gen. Assemb., Reg. Sess. (Mo. 2017).

special session. His remarks in a hearing before the Missouri Senate Seniors, Families and Children Committee on the day S.B. 5 was introduced clearly explain the bill's goal. Senator Koenig noted his bill would simply add another area of law to the list of narrow subjects in which the attorney general has original jurisdiction – including gaming violations, Medicaid fraud, and hazardous waste among other subjects. See Travis Zimpfer, “Senate committee passes abortion bills; action on floor set for Wednesday,” The Missouri Times (June 13, 2017) (<http://themissouritimes.com/41596/senate-committee-passes-abortion-bills-action-floor-set-wednesday>).

Indeed, the title and contents of S.B. 5 as introduced leave no room for question about the bill's original purpose. First, the title: the original title of the bill was “An Act [t]o repeal section 188.075, RSMo, and to enact in lieu thereof one new section relating to the jurisdiction of the attorney general to enforce state abortion laws, with penalty provisions.” See S.B. 5, 99th Gen. Assemb., 2nd Extraordinary Sess. (as introduced, June 12, 2017), Pet. Ex. B; see also Stroh Brewery Co. v. State, 954 S.W.2d 323, 326 (Mo. 1997) (concluding that although bill title “an act to amend chapter 311, RSMo, by adding one new section relating to the auction of vintage wine, with penalty provisions” did not clearly convey exclusive purpose as to the auction of vintage wine without further limitation, it did convey “that the amendment of Missouri's liquor control law, chapter 311, was the purpose of the bill.”). And, true to the title of the bill, the contents of S.B. 5 as introduced proposed the enactment of one new provision of law regarding the attorney general's jurisdiction, making no changes to the prior version of § 188.075 other than to add the following:

3. The attorney general shall have concurrent original jurisdiction throughout the state, along with each prosecuting attorney and circuit attorney within their respective jurisdictions, to commence actions for a violation of any provision of this chapter, for a violation of any state law on the use of public funds for an abortion, or for a violation of any state law which regulates an abortion facility or a person who performs or induces an abortion. The attorney general, or prosecuting attorney or circuit attorney within their respective jurisdictions, may seek injunctive or other relief against any person who, or entity which, is in violation of any provision of this chapter, misuses public funds for an abortion, or violates any state law which regulates an abortion facility or a person who performs or induces an abortion.

Pet. Ex. B. Both the title and contents of S.B. 5 match exactly, leaving no space from which to divine an alternative original purpose other than to expand the Attorney General's powers to include the prosecution of violations of existing abortion laws.

In contrast to the original version of the bill, the final version of S.B. 5 is a 40-page hodgepodge of provisions that not only change the prosecutorial powers of the Attorney General, but also impact a wide array of disparate areas of law. These provisions are not germane to the objective of expanding the attorney general's original jurisdiction and are unrelated to S.B. 5's original purpose. For instance, S.B. 5 wades deep into the serious topics of preemption and home rule by creating Section 188.125, which preempts the law-making powers of political subdivisions in various ways. Section 188.125.2 blocks political subdivisions from, inter alia, enacting or enforcing an ordinance that "adversely affects an alternatives to abortion agency's operations or speech," Pet. Ex. A at 17, maintaining a policy that has the effect of indirectly requiring a person to "participate in abortion" against the person's moral or religious beliefs, adopting an ordinance requiring a property owner to rent to an abortion facility if contrary to that property owner's religious or moral beliefs, or adopting a regulation requiring a health care provider "to provide coverage for or to participate in a health plan that includes benefits that are not otherwise required by state law," id. at 18. Clearly, the overarching purpose of Section 188.125 is to limit the powers of political subdivisions of Missouri.

As another example, the final version of S.B. 5 newly creates section 188.160, which requires entities “involved in abortion” to maintain a written policy relating to whistleblower protections for employees who disclose actual, potential, or alleged violations of any “applicable federal or state laws or administrative rules, regulations, or standards.” Id. at 19. While section 188.160 may represent another step in the 99th General Assembly’s project of remaking Missouri law on whistleblower protections, see S.B. 43, 99th Gen. Assemb., Reg. Sess. (Mo. 2017), codified at Mo. Rev. Stat. § 285.575, also known as the “Whistleblower’s Protection Act,” it in no way revises the original jurisdiction of the attorney general and thus has a different purpose than the original purpose of S.B. 5. In addition, S.B. 5 contains provisions which create new obligations for the Department of Health and Senior Services related to licensing abortion facilities—a far cry from granting new powers to the Attorney General. These obligations range from requiring the Department to create a new licensing category of “abortion facility” and complete annual inspections, Pet. Ex. A at 33, to a mandate to submit annual reports to the General Assembly related to pathology tissue reports, id. at 15–16. Nor does the challenged same-physician requirement relate to the bill’s original purpose. As introduced, S.B. 5 did not touch upon the subject of informed consent; indeed, the Act altered neither the conduct of abortion providers nor the operations of the health care settings in which they work, as it was strictly related to the Attorney General’s powers.

Section 21 does not prohibit legislators from extending the scope of a bill after it has been introduced, so long as the original purpose is maintained. See Jackson Cnty. Sports Complex Auth. v. State, 226 S.W.3d 156, 160 (Mo. 2007). The General Assembly would have been within its bounds to add additional provisions relating to the expansion of the attorney general’s original jurisdiction over existing laws. Arguably, the bill could have been subsequently changed to add provisions more broadly related to the prosecution and enforcement of, and punishment for, violations of the state’s existing abortion laws, (e.g., increasing the criminal penalties for violations or creating a civil cause of action for private citizens). But the later amendments to S.B. 5 went far beyond the bill’s original purpose of granting the Attorney General concurrent jurisdiction along with each prosecuting attorney and circuit attorney within their respective jurisdictions. There is no indication from either the title or the contents of the original version of S.B. 5 that it had anything to do with imposing numerous additional obligations and restrictions on various entities, including the Department of Health, abortion providers, and political subdivisions.

The Missouri Constitution’s original purpose provision “provide[s] the citizens of Missouri with necessary and valuable legislative accountability and transparency,” Legends Bank, 361 S.W.3d at 389, by “facilitat[ing] orderly procedure, avoid[ing] surprise, and prevent[ing] ‘logrolling,’ in which several matters that would not individually command a majority vote are rounded up into a single bill to ensure passage,” id.; Lebeau, 422 S.W.3d at 289 (internal citation omitted). The passage of S.B. 5, including the Act, directly contravenes these goals and results in an unconstitutional mismatch between the narrow purpose of the original version of S.B. 5, which was to revise Missouri Revised Statutes § 188.175 to expand the attorney general’s jurisdiction over existing laws, and the wide-ranging amendments made to the bill during its passage, which make numerous non-germane alterations and additions to unrelated areas of law. The Act, in particular, is not germane to the original purpose of S.B. 5 and Plaintiffs are therefore likely to succeed on this claim as well.

B. THE REMAINING FACTORS FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTIVE RELIEF ALL FAVOR PLAINTIFFS

1. Plaintiffs and Their Patients Face Irreparable Injury

Irreparable harm is established if monetary remedies cannot provide adequate compensation for improper conduct. Peabody Holding Co., Inc. v. Costain Grp. PLC, 813 F. Supp. 1402 (E.D. Mo. 1993). The term “adequate remedy at law” generally means that damages will not adequately compensate the plaintiff for the injury or threatened injury, or that the plaintiff would be faced with a multiplicity of suits at law. Snelling v. City of St. Louis Dep’t of Pub. Utils. - Water Div., 897 S.W.2d 642 (Mo. Ct. App. 1995).

Plaintiffs have plainly demonstrated that absent an injunction they and their patients will suffer irreparable harm for which there is no adequate remedy at law. If allowed to take effect, the Act will prevent whole categories of women from accessing an abortion, and delay other women up to 2-4 weeks from being able to have an abortion, which will increase medical risks. This unquestionably constitutes an irreparable injury for which there is no adequate remedy at law. See Mo. State Med. Ass’n v. State, No. 07AC-CC00567, 2007 WL 6346841 (Mo. Cir. Ct. for Cole Cnty., July 3, 2007) (granting temporary restraining order against law that restricted practice of midwifery and would impose irreparable injury on physicians and their pregnant patients); Harris v. Bd. of Supervisors, L.A. Cnty., 366 F.3d 754, 766 (9th Cir. 2004) (plaintiffs established likelihood of irreparable harm where evidence showed they would experience pain, complications, and other adverse effects due to delayed medical treatment); Planned Parenthood of Kan. & Mid-Mo. v. Lyskowski, No. 2:15-CV-04273-NKL, 2015 WL 9463198, at *4 (W.D. Mo. Dec. 28, 2015) (any period during which plaintiff could not perform abortions because of the loss of its license constitutes irreparable injury), appeal dismissed (May 12, 2016).

In addition, the violation of Plaintiffs’ and their patients’ constitutional rights caused by the Act itself constitutes irreparable injury. See Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 (1976); Deerfield Med. Ctr. v. City of Deerfield Beach, 661 F.2d 328, 338 (5th Cir. Unit B. Nov. 1981)

(threatening the fundamental right to privacy mandates a finding of irreparable injury); Planned Parenthood of Minn., Inc. v. Citizens for Cmty. Action, 558 F.2d 861, 867 (8th Cir. 1977) (holding that plaintiff’s showing of interference “with the exercise of its constitutional rights and the rights of its patients supports a finding of irreparable injury”).

2. Preliminarily Enjoining The Act Will Not Harm Defendant and Will Serve the Public Interest

Finally, the balance of equities also weighs heavily in favor of maintaining the status quo. As set forth above, Plaintiffs and their patients will suffer serious harm if the law takes effect, whereas Defendants only stand to lose the ability temporarily to enforce a law that is likely to be held unconstitutional, where there is no evidence that that law will help even one woman. Moreover, the public interest will be served by injunctive relief. The public interest is not served by putting women’s health at risk nor by allowing an unconstitutional government action. See Hill v. Mo. Conservation Comm’n, No. 15OS-CC00005-01, 2016 WL 8814770 at *18 (Mo. Cir. Ct. Gasconade Cnty. Nov. 17, 2016) (“[T]here can be no public interest in enforcement of an unauthorized government action.”); Mo. State Med. Ass’n, 2007 WL 6346841 (“[B]alancing of the harms favors immediate injunctive relief, because a restraining order will not harm the State of Missouri and will actually further its interests in ensuring the health and safety of its citizens.”); see also Saint v. Neb. Sch. Activities Ass’n, 684 F. Supp. 626, 628 (D. Neb. 1988) (noting “no discernable harm” to defendant in losing the ability to enforce potentially unconstitutional regulations); Reinert v. Haas, 585 F. Supp. 477, 481 (S.D. Iowa 1984) (public interest “is always well served by protecting the constitutional rights of all its members”); see also Kirkeby v. Furness, 52 F.3d 772, 775 (8th Cir. 1995) (public interest favored injunction against unconstitutional ordinance).

C. BOND IN THIS CASE

Plaintiffs respectfully submit that bond be set at no more than the nominal amount of $100. See Planned Parenthood of Kan. and Mid-Mo. v. Nixon, No. 0516-CV25949, 2005 WL 3116528, at *1, *2 (Mo. Cir. Ct. 2005) (maintaining $100 bond for TRO and subsequent preliminary injunction in case challenging law creating civil cause of action related to minors' abortions). Because a preliminary injunction in this case would merely maintain the status quo, Defendants are not at risk of harm should they later prevail in this litigation.

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, the Court should grant Plaintiffs' Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order, followed by a Preliminary Injunction, and enjoin Defendants from enforcing the Act.

COMPREHENSIVE HEALTH OF
PLANNED PARENTHOOD GREAT
PLAINS, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

JOSHUA D. HAWLEY, in his official capacity as Attorney General of Missouri, et al.,

Defendants.

CASE NO. 1716-CV24109

[PROPOSED] TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

This matter comes before the Court on Plaintiffs’ Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction preventing Defendants from enforcing portions of Senate Bill 5, 99th General Assembly, 2nd Extraordinary Session (2017 Mo.) (“S.B. 5”), to be codified at Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.027.6 (“the Act”).

Having considered the submissions of counsel for Plaintiffs and Defendants, the Court HEREBY FINDS that Plaintiffs have demonstrated that the Act threatens irreparable harm to Plaintiffs and their patients because, if allowed to take effect, the Act will violate Plaintiffs’ and their patients’ rights under the Missouri Constitution, and will impose substantial burdens on patient care such that, for whole categories of patients, abortion care would no longer be available, and for virtually all other abortion patients, it would be either unavailable or so delayed that they would experience harmful delays which carry increased medical risk.

The Court HEREBY FINDS that Plaintiffs have demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits of their argument that the Act violates the due process rights of Plaintiffs and their staff and patients, as secured under the Missouri Constitution. The Court further finds that Plaintiffs have demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits of their argument that S.B. 5, and the Act specifically, violate the Missouri Constitution because the purpose of the bill was unconstitutionally amended during its passage through the General Assembly.

The Court FURTHER FINDS that the public interest is served by preventing implementation of this law, which is likely to be ruled unconstitutional and which puts women's health and safety at risk. Therefore, the balance of harms tips in favor of entering a preliminary injunction.

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that Plaintiff's Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order is GRANTED. This temporary restraining order shall prevent Defendants from enforcing the provisions of the Act, to be codified at Mo. Rev. Stat. § 188.127.6, and the status quo shall remain in effect until further order of this Court.

NOTICE OF CASE MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE FOR CIVIL CASE AND ORDER FOR MEDIATION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a Case Management Conference will be held with the Honorable CHARLES H MCKENZIE on 05-MAR-2018 in DIVISION 13 at 08:30 AM. All Applications for Continuance of a Case Management Conference should be filed on or before Wednesday of the week prior to the case management setting. Applications for Continuance of a Case Management Conference shall comply with Supreme Court Rule and 16th Cir. R. 34.1. Continuance of a Case Management Conference will only be granted for good cause shown because it is the desire of the Court to meet with counsel and parties in all cases within the first 4 months that a case has been on file. All counsel and parties are directed to check Case.NET on the 16th Judicial Circuit web site at www.16thcircuit.org after filing an application for continuance to determine whether or not it has been granted.

A lead attorney of record must be designated for each party as required by Local Rule 3.5.1. A separate pleading designating the lead attorney of record shall be filed by each party as described in Local Rule 3.5.2. The parties are advised that if they do not file a separate pleading designating lead counsel, even in situations where there is only one attorney representing the party, JIS will not be updated by civil records department, and copies of orders will be sent to the address currently shown in JIS. Civil Records does not update attorney information from answers or other pleadings. The Designation of Lead Attorney pleading shall contain the name of lead counsel, firm name, mailing address, phone number, FAX number and E-mail address of the attorney who is lead counsel.

At the Case Management Conference, counsel should be prepared to address at least the following:

- a. A trial setting;
- b. Expert Witness Disclosure Cutoff Date;
- c. A schedule for the orderly preparation of the case for trial;
- d. Any issues which require input or action by the Court;
- e. The status of settlement negotiations.

MEDIATION

The parties are ordered to participate in mediation pursuant to Supreme Court Rule 17. Mediation shall be completed within 10 months after the date the case is filed for complex cases, and 6 months after the date the case is filed for other circuit cases, unless otherwise ordered by the Court. Each party shall personally appear at the mediation and participate in the process. In the event a party does not have the authority to enter into a settlement, then a representative of the entity that does have actual authority to enter into a settlement on behalf of the party shall also personally attend the mediations with the party.

The parties shall confer and select a mutually agreeable person to act as mediator in this case. If the parties are unable to agree on a mediator the court will appoint a mediator at the Case Management Conference.

Each party shall pay their respective pro-rata cost of the mediation directly to the mediator.

POLICIES/PROCEDURES

Please refer to the Court's web page www.16thcircuit.org for division policies and procedural information listed by each judge.
